Sir Roger Scruton is a philosopher, public intellectual and author of over 40 books, many of which are widely translated. Among his recent books are Beauty: A Very Short Introduction (2009); Green Philosophy (2012); and Confessions of a Heretic (2016). In 2016 he was recipient of the Polish Lech Kaczynski Foundation’s Medal for Courage and Integrity, was awarded the Italian Masi Prize for the Culture of Wine in recognition of his book I Drink Therefore I Am, and was knighted in the Queen’s Birthday Honours List. He is a Fellow of the British Academy and of the Royal Society of Literature, and is commonly ranked among the most important philosophers of aesthetics of the last century.

The Annual Anscombe Lecture in Ethics commemorates Elizabeth Anscombe (1919 – 2001), former Penn Professor and one of the most influential woman philosophers and Catholic intellectuals of the modern era.
